

Abstract

A frequency response useful for simply and inexpensively enhancing an audio signal in such a way that the quality of audible sound produced from the enhanced audio signal more closely approaches that of the original sound heard live in an acoustically designed environment.